CVCFL Symposium 2026

Date: November 14, 2026

Location: Rosen Shingle Creek Hotel

Jointly Provided By: Postgraduate Institute for Medicine (PIM) and The Cardiovascular Center of Florida (CVCFL)

Target Audience:

This activity is intended for physicians, physician assistants, nurse practitioners, nurses, and other healthcare professionals involved in the prevention, diagnosis, treatment, and ongoing management of patients with cardiovascular disease in primary care, ambulatory care, and specialty care settings.

Educational Objectives:

After completing this activity, the participant should be better able to:

1. Apply current evidence-based recommendations for the diagnosis, risk assessment, and management of hypertension and lipid disorders, including the appropriate use of coronary artery calcium scoring to guide cardiovascular risk reduction.
2. Identify contemporary approaches to the evaluation and management of common cardiovascular conditions, including atrial fibrillation, heart failure, peripheral arterial disease, structural heart disease, and cardiac arrhythmias requiring prolonged monitoring or specialty referral.
3. Recognize cardiovascular risk across diverse patient populations, including the long-term cardiovascular implications of pregnancy-related complications and strategies to promote cardiovascular health span, prevention, and longevity.
4. Evaluate patients with suspected coronary microvascular disease or endothelial dysfunction and describe the role of advanced cardiovascular imaging, including PET/CT, in diagnosis and clinical management.
5. Describe current and emerging applications of artificial intelligence in cardiovascular medicine and assess their potential role, benefits, limitations, and appropriate integration into clinical practice.
6. Identify clinical findings and patient characteristics that warrant timely referral for specialized cardiovascular evaluation, electrophysiology assessment, structural heart intervention, vascular evaluation, or advanced cardiovascular testing.
